A still from the British sitcom 'The IT Crowd'. In the center, Maurice Moss (Robert Webb) stands with his hands behind his back, looking slightly upwards. He has curly brown hair and wears glasses, a red tie, and a red and white checkered shirt. To his right, the back of Jen Barber's head (Katherine Parkinson) is visible; she has blonde hair tied back with a clip. The background is a messy office with papers on the wall, a door, and various office supplies.

THE IT CROWD

A collection of hand-drawn science icons. The icons include: a chemistry flask with bubbles, a calculator, an atom with a central nucleus and three elliptical orbits, a cell with a nucleus, a microorganism with cilia, a line graph with a bell curve, a globe showing continents, a rocket ship, a lightbulb with rays emanating from it, a test tube with a plant sprout, an apple, the equation $E=mc^2$, a power plug, a book, a lightbulb, a sine wave, a abacus, the symbol $\sqrt{2}$, a star, a pill, a hexagonal molecular structure, a magnet with '+' and '-' poles, a brain, a DNA double helix, a water molecule H_2O , and a molecular structure with three spheres.

A vintage desktop computer system is shown against a white background. The system includes a light gray tower unit on the left, a CRT monitor on the right, a keyboard in the foreground, and a mouse to the right of the keyboard. The tower unit has a floppy disk drive and a CD-ROM drive. The monitor has a dark screen and a stand. The keyboard is a standard QWERTY layout, and the mouse is a two-button model.
